

DENNISON HALL
Site
180 South River Street

Asa R. Brundage, an attorney, is identified on the 1870 city map, in the 1882, 1894, and 1904 city atlases, and on the 1889 city view as being the owner and resident of the Italinate style house that stood on this site. The structure, razed in 1971, was probably built in the 1860s when the Italinate style was most popular in the Wilkes-Barre area. A sketch of the house is featured on the 1889 city view.

Wilkes College purchased the property in 1959.¹ The building, named Nathan Denison Hall in honor of an early settler, was a residence hall at the time of demolition. The only major alteration made by the college was the removal of a large front porch that wrapped around the south side of the structure.
