WHAT IS THE DISASTER RESEARCH CENTER?

The Disaster Research Center is a part of The Ohio State University. As part of the academic and research complex, the Center is under the supervision and control of the University. All members of the Center are faculty or staff members of the University.

WHAT KINDS OF STUDIES DOES THE CENTER CONDUCT?

The Center is engaged in the scientific study of individual, group, and organizational responses to community emergencies. Studies are conducted both in this country and overseas. Major focus is placed on obtaining an extensive picture of the human and social problems generated by catastrophes and disturbances, and how they are solved by affected persons and communities. It is a basic policy of the Center not to conduct investigations or to engage in other than purely scholarly studies.

HOW ARE THE RESULTS OF THE STUDIES REPORTED?

Personal answers and statements obtained are treated as confidential. Names and other individual identifications are never used or revealed to anyone outside of the professional staff of the Center. General findings are reported in articles in professional journals and in The Ohio State University Disaster Research Center Monograph Series.

WHAT IS THE PURPOSE OF THE STUDIES?

The Center is attempting to obtain a picture of what happens to people and groups in large-scale emergencies, so that more effective plans can be made for meeting problems when they arise. The findings are available to all public and private agencies charged with handling the personal and human problems that arise in community emergencies.

For further information about the Center or its work, please write to:

The Disaster Research Center, the only one of its kind in the world, was established at The Ohio State University in 1963. The Center is engaged in a variety of sociological research studies on the reactions of groups and organizations in community-wide emergencies, particularly natural disasters. Since its inception 202 different field studies have been carried out. Teams have gone to earthquakes (in Japan, Chile, Yugoslavia, Italy, Iran, El Salvador, Greece, California and Alaska), hurricanes (in Florida, Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana and Japan), floods (in Italy, Canada, Iowa, Montana, Pennsylvania, Texas, Alaska, Colorado, Virginia, California, Minnesota and the Dakotas), as well as tornadoes in ten different states. Large explosions and forest fires, toxic incidents, destructive seismic waves and major dam breaks have also been studied in Australia, Italy, Canada and different sections of the United States. For purposes of comparison, Center personnel have examined organizational responses to civil disturbances in about a dozen American cities as well as Curacao in the West Indies.

The Center has 15 professionals on its staff plus supporting clerical and secretarial personnel. It is headed by Professors Russell R. Dynes and E. L. Quarantelli, both members of the Department of Sociology in the University.

Field research teams ranging in size from two to five researchers are prepared to leave for any community emergency on two-hours notice. Longer range research focused on emergency-induced community change is conducted as well as immediate on-the-spot studies. Alaska, New Orleans, Topeka and Indianapolis were restudied several years after major natural disasters. In addition, 16 cities around the country ranging from Lubbock, Texas and Buffalo, New York to Los Angeles, California and Miami, Florida are regularly monitored for community crises.

The major research focus of the Center is on emergency organizations and their disaster planning and responses to large scale community crises. Center personnel are also conducting special studies on legal aspects of natural disasters, cross-cultural responses to national catastrophes, the role of the local community in preparing for diffuse emergencies such as water pollution, rumor control centers, the emergence of new groups during periods of stress, mass media reporting of community crises, and methodological problems in the study of crowd and police behavior in localized disorders. Research, utilizing audio and recording devices in a laboratory, has also been conducted that simulated conditions paralleling real-life stress on social processes; these have ranged from studies of the communication behavior of police dispatching units to an examination of cross-cultural interaction.

The research is intended to provide basic knowledge about group behavior and social life as well as information which can be used to develop more effective plans for future emergencies. Besides collecting its own data, the Center also serves as a repository for documents and materials collected in previous research by other agencies and researchers. The Center's research library is open to all interested scholars and public and private agencies involved in natural disaster planning. The Center has its own monograph series, and also publishes a quarterly newsletter, Unscheduled Events, available on request.

Support for Center activities and research comes from diverse sources including the Center for Applied Social Problems in the National Institute of Mental Health, the U.S. Defense Civil Preparedness Agency, the water resources research program of the Department of the Interior, the National Science Foundation, as well as other state and federal agencies, and from the University including the Mershon Social Science Program.

The following article of interest is taken from the September 1972 issue of
THE NATIONAL JEWISH MONTHLY

True, the government has said to the people who have suffered losses: "We will make sure you have a place to live for at least a year." True, the government and other organizations have taken the lion's share in cleanup operations. True, the government said: "We will loan you money at low interest."

But the government also said, just two months before, to North Vietnam: "We will rebuild you." And after World War II, the government said to Japan and Germany: "We will give you 88 billion dollars and rebuild you."

Now the government says to the people of Wyoming Valley: "We will LOAN you the money."

Loan money alone will not revive the community; only government grants can do that. ■

LABOR MARKET LETTER

A Periodic Review of Current Employment Developments and Prospects

Flood

VOL. XXVII, No. 7

WILKES-BARRE--HAZLETON
LUZERNE COUNTY
JULY, 1972

Released 8/25/72

EMPLOYMENT

Total employment in Luzerne County during the mid-week of July was estimated to be 126,800. This figure represents a decline of 10,800 workers since mid-June. Many people were not working at their regular jobs, but rather at flood clean-up work. Other workers, both from within and outside of Luzerne County, joined the clean-up. This point was evident as the work force climbed by 15,600 or 9.5 percent since mid-June. The current employment level is 7,600 less than the July, 1971 figure of 134,400 workers.

Nonmanufacturing employment at 68,600 employed, was the hardest hit major group - dropping by 4,900 jobs. This decline was led by losses of 2,200 each in services and wholesale and retail trades and 800 in government. The only nonmanufacturing line to show an increase was construction - up 600. Manufacturing was also hard hit by the flood. The current estimate of 47,300 workers is 4,000 less than the June figure. Both durable goods and nondurable goods were affected, showing losses of 700 and 3,300 workers respectively. The "all other workers" group declined by 2,000 to a level of 9,900. Farm employment showed the only gain - up 100 to the 1,000 level.

UNEMPLOYMENT

Preliminary calculations indicate that total unemployment in mid-July was at a level of 37,300 people or 26,400 more than in mid-June and 25,400 more than in July, 1971. The current estimate represents 22.7 percent of the civilian work force. On a seasonally adjusted basis, the current rate of unemployment for this Labor Market Area is 19.7 percent as compared to 6.2 percent for Pennsylvania and 5.5 percent for the U.S. as a whole. This area has been reclassified by the U. S. Department of Labor from Group "D" to "F" (an area of substantial unemployment).

HOURS AND EARNINGS

Despite the flood, average weekly earnings of production workers in the area factories reached an all time high in July. Average weekly earnings for the mid-week of July were calculated to be $116.75 or $1.00 more than the June level of $115.75. This increase was the result of an average workweek which was two-tenths of an hour longer and an average hourly rate which was one cent higher than the comparable figures for June. The current weekly average earnings of $116.75 is $10.03 higher than the July, 1971 average of $106.72.

Re: Flood Recovery Task Force, Inc.

Dear Judge:

Pursuant to your request, I want to advise you that there is well over 50 people who have agreed to serve as members of the "Local Government" sub-committee in its efforts to support the approval of a Governmental Study Commission.

Rather than provide you with a listing of all of the members of this sub-committee, I am listing herewith the names of those who were selected to serve as members of a temporary Steering Committee:

Madge Benovitz - Dr.
John Churnetski
Charles Hardwick - Luzerne Products
John Hibbard

Thomas O'Donnell - Home
Joseph A. Quinn, Jr.
Edward Schechter
A. J. Sordoni, III

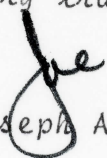

For reasons that I am sure you can understand, the makeup of this Steering Committee might change drastically in order to broadly represent the various groups and factions and geographical areas within this community.

I also think it is imperative that we do not publicize the names of the members of this Committee at the present time because there are a substantial number of other individuals who we hope to have serve on the larger Committee and who might feel offended if they have not been asked to serve prior to any such publicity.

The Honorable Max Rosenn
