2 Slovak bicyclists pedal for world peace

■ Visitors receive warm welcome in city, where they pitched their mission to anyone interested in joining them next year

By MARK E. JONES

Times Leader Staff Writer

WILKES-BARRE — Two Slovak bicyclists pulled into Wilkes-Barre on Friday during the early stages of a 2,300-mile tour to promote world peace.

Peter Jahn, 44, and Anna Zifcakova, 42, are asking other pedal pushers to join them in 1995, when they repeat the global trip, traveling from Washington, D.C., to Nagasaki, Japan.

"The bicycle is a symbol," Jahn said, speaking through an interpreter. "We feel there are enough people who are bicycling enthusiasts, especially in Europe, that they could join together in a display for peace and justice."

Next year's trek will coincide with the 50th anniversary of America's atomic bombing of Nagasaki and the end of World War II.

The Slovak cyclists hope to attract an international group of 30 to 40 riders, all of whom must be good pedalers and goodwill messengers. But it's not necessary to have a "no-nuke" philosophy, said Philip R. Tuhy, a Wilkes-Barre resident and a host during the cyclists' two-day visit.

"It's not an anti-nuclear demonstration," Tuhy said. "It's simply a reminder to us that there was an enormous amount of destructive energy released those 50 years ago. It's a way of telling us, let's be a little more civilized about things."

The Slovaks met with city officials Friday, an encounter marked by much hand-shaking and smiling. Neither City Administrator Richard Muesig nor City Clerk William Brace speaks Slovak. But they showered the visitors with Wilkes-Barre trinkets, including city keys and monogrammed shoeshine kits.

Today, the cyclists will tour Wilkes-Barre's Sacred Heart Slovak Church, North Main Street, because of its link to their homeland. The church's founder, the late Rev. Joseph Murgas, was a Slovak born in the town of Tajov.

An inventor, artist and philanthropist, Murgas became a hero in his hometown, where Jahn operates a travel agency.

"Father Murgas not only worked [in Wilkes-Barre], but while he was here, he supported the people in Slovakia," Jahn said. "His activities and our activities are similar — Murgas was also a friend of man."

The European visitors will be entertained by the Slovak Heritage Society of Northeastern Pennsylvania and leaders of local Slovak churches. Monsignor Francis Beeda accompanied the cyclists yesterday after a visit to St. Joseph's Church in Hazleton, which he called "the oldest Slovak Roman Catholic church in the Western Hemisphere."

The bikers traveled from Hazleton to Wilkes-Barre by rental car, not muscle-power, because a snafu in Washington, D.C., delayed their trip by one day. "It's more important to obtain new contacts and partners," Jahn said. "If we have extra time, we bike."

The cycling duo and driver John Moravcik, 25, plan to rendezvous with the Wyoming Valley Bicycle Club at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Dallas High School parking lot.

On Sunday morning, the Slovaks leave for Binghamton, N.Y.

Slovak bicyclists Peter Jahn and Anna Zifcakova stopped in Wilkes-Barre to promote their 1995 Bike for Peace bicycle tour. Pictured are Jahn, Richard Muesig, city administrator, Zifcakova and John Moravcik, the pair's driver.

'One small step' 25 years ago had Valley moonstruck

■ Everyone seemed to be watching when Neil Armstrong became the first human to walk on the lunar surface.

By CECE TODD

Times Leader Staff Writer

WILKES-BARRE — As he stepped onto the moon's surface, astronaut Neil Armstrong uttered the words that would mark this day in history:

"That's one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind."

More than 200,000 miles away in Pennsylvania's Wyoming Valley, his words were barely audible to residents who huddled around their black-and-white televisions, crackling with static and fuzzy reception.

Outside, roads were deserted. Everyone wanted to watch man's first walk on the moon.

"As we watched, I remember that nobody talked much," says Jane Lampe-Groh, dean of student affairs at Wilkes University. "It was such a mesmerizing thing that you didn't chat about it. ... Everyone was speechless."

Today, on the 25th anniversary of that feat, Luzerne County residents recall a time when space travel and a stroll on the moon captivated the imagination.

Months of anticipation had led to that moment. Moon mania was everywhere.

The local Dairy Queen sold "Moon Sundaes," while

Edwin E. 'Buzz' Aldrin poses for a photo on the surface of the moon in July, 1969. Astronaut Neil Armstrong, who shot the photo, is reflected in Aldrin's face mask, as are the lunar module, the U.S. flag and a television camera. It has been a quarter century since Aldrin and Armstrong became the first humans to walk on the moon.

Elby's restaurant in Edwinstownville offered the "Astronaut Special" — a free 16-pound watermelon with purchase of a bucket of chicken.

A Bloomsburg radio station only played songs with "moon" in the lyrics, and a local business took out a quarter-page newspaper ad greeting the "mystic old man in the moon."

In the basement of a men's dorm at Wilkes University, Lampe-Groh and a group of students watched Armstrong take those first steps. Just a few days earlier, she had moved to the area for her new job at the university, but her furniture — including the television — was lost somewhere between Boston and Wilkes-Barre.

"I think we overuse the word awesome, but that was one of the most awesome things I had ever seen," she says of the televised spectacle. "You almost couldn't conceptualize what you were seeing. I had a difficult time believing this was real."

Reality didn't fully sink in for Lampe-Groh until astronaut Buzz Aldrin visited the university about eight years ago.

"I was so tongue-tied," she says. "It's difficult to make light luncheon conversation with someone who's been to the moon."

Twenty-five years ago, Philip Tuhy, professor emeritus at Wilkes, enjoyed the moonwalk as a great social event. Part of a barbershop quartet, Tuhy and his fellow singers gathered with their families to watch and wonder as the lunar module descended upon the moon.

"We all wondered, 'Would it touch down?' and then we got into a discussion about how they would get it back off," Tuhy says. "We continued to watch. We had an old-fashioned cocktail. ... We sang."

When Hugh Johnson remembers that day, the first thing that comes to mind is the weather — appropriate because Johnson today is a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Avoca.

"It was a cloudy, murky day. There were rain showers," says Johnson, who was 11 at the time and living in Philadelphia. "My mom swore that every time they launched a rocket, it would change the weather."

Johnson was fascinated by Armstrong's walk on the moon but had no desire to follow in the astronaut's footsteps.

"I wouldn't mind orbiting the earth, but I never wanted to go to the moon," he says. "The moon's not really a hip kind of place."

But Wilkes professor Tom Baldino definitely had lunar aspirations. He was a 20-year-old college student at the time.

"I remember Walter Cronkite saying this was man's first steps to the stars, and then I remember thinking to myself, 'Beyond the moon, there will be Mars,'" he says. "I believed that within 10 or 15 years, we would have commercial flights to the moon."

Of course, that never happened. During the years, interest in and funding for the space program waned. But for one moment on July 20, 1969, a nation — and the Wyoming Valley — were spellbound by the possibilities.

"I remember being fascinated by the whole thing," says Sara Dickey of Mountaintop. "But most of all, I remember looking up at the moon at night and thinking, 'There's someone up there.'"

WILKES PROFESSOR ATTENDS LANDMARK CONFERENCE IN FORMER SOVIET REPUBLIC

WILKES-BARRE--Wilkes University political science professor, Philip R. Tuhy of Wilkes-Barre, recently attended a conference in the republic of Slovakia as a member of the United States delegation. Representatives met the leaders of the newly formed republic to exchange information, discuss relations between Slovakia and other countries, and develop ways for people of Slovak descent, once cut-off from their ancestral homeland by the iron curtain, to help the new republic.

During the conference, representatives arrived in the city of Bratislava to meet with the new leaders of Slovakia including the President, Prime Minister Vladimir Meciar, and President of the National Parliament. The delegations also met with the heads of various departments including the department of technology, environmental resources, and foreign affairs.

Tuhy discussed how Wilkes University can be a service to Slovakia in handling its environmental problems. For example, Slovakia is concerned with the problem of radon. Tuhy believes that the Wilkes Earth and Environmental Science Department could be a great service to Slovakia. "Wilkes has one of the best radon test labs in all of the northeast." he said.

This recent visit to Slovakia was not Tuhy's first. The visit was part of a project that has been ongoing for three years. During his sabattical leave in 1990, he visited Russia where he lectured, and taught classes in several universities. During his stay, he was the first speaker from the western part of the world to lecture at Slovakia's military academy.

Philip R. Tuhy Teaches and Writes in New Republic

While Central Europe and the other Republics of the Union of the Soviet Republics are in the throes of political turmoil, the Slovak Republic of Czechoslovakia, in the road to establishing democracy and its practices through the efforts of a native-born American of Slovak descent, who has and is contributing his expertise in the political re-organization of the newly-formed republic.

Vowed in public administration through his education at Viljaran University and as a Samuel F. Vela Scholar in State and Local government at the University of Pennsylvania, Philip R. Tuhy has devoted his life to not only teaching but to performing public administrative and related services. He is the director of the Institute of Regional Affairs at Wilkes College.

When Tuhy applied for sabbatical leave at Wilkes University for the Fall Semester 1990, his purpose was to study "Collegial Policy Making in a Socialist State as Applied to Official Municipal Functions."

The leave was approved Sept. 18, 1988. He targeted Czechoslovakia as his study area, being a descendant of Slovakian emigrants, he reads, writes and has a conversational command of the Slovak language. However, Nov. 17, 1989 the "Velvet Revolution" occurred in Czechoslovakia, the overthrow of the Communist regime, which made the original purpose of the study moot.

Not discouraged, in January 1990 Tuhy circulated his curriculum vitae and a general letter of introduction to a number of individuals with whom he had been in contact on his previous and private visit of Czechoslovakia.

In March, the Wilkes professor was contacted by Dr. David P. Daniel, special advisor to the director of Foreign Relations, Department of Slovak Ministry of Education, Youth and Sports. He was assigned as a consultant to teach and study by the Ministry and to the Slovak Republic.

Thus on July 23, 1990 he departed for the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic where he spent the most exciting and rewarding six months of his career.

Within 24 hours of his arrival in Bratislava, he was assigned to the Office of the Senate Secretary in the President of the Slovak Academy of Sciences, a group of 60 research institutes. He was given the title "advisor for foreign relations questions in the organization and financing of science."

He was assigned to assist the senior staff in the improvement of their conversational English, edit the English version of current research projects available for international cooperation, evaluate proposed reorganization of the academy, financial reorganization and establish contact with similar organizations throughout the world.

For the Slovak Republic this was an exciting experience in the discovery of democracy and just how it operates. Tuhy realized, "I was so fortunate to be a part of the beginning of a new era not only in Slovakia but in Central Europe."

Meanwhile, two deputy secretaries of science, who were former members of the Federal Parliament when it was under the Communist rule, introduced him to a large segment of the cultural, educational, political and scientific community of the Slovak Republic.

As part of the semi-weekly discussion group held at the Gallery Vysehrad, he was invited to present a lecture on "The Dilemma of Democracy," to submit an article for the publication "Literary Tyndalus," the second most popular and widely read literary weekly magazine in Slovakia.

In addition he was invited to present a lecture to the staff and students of the Federal Military Teacher's Academy. He then held a seminar for the political staff in what political science is called in Slovakia to discuss teaching methods and to review the curriculum that had been prepared for the four-year study program.

He presented a seminar for the Institute of State and Law of the Slovak Academy of Sciences on "Public Administration in the United States."

There were many meetings, seminars and lectures that he was involved in but perhaps one of the most exciting was following the November election, he was invited to meet with the Mayor of Prešov and the Mayor of Brestova and Bradion, to discuss problems associated with the establishment of a Home Rule City. These two cities are located at opposite ends of the Republic of Slovakia.

CITY HALL — Typical of the Slovak Republic's local seat of government is the city hall in Prešov. This was one of the many places that Philip R. Tuhy met with local officials.

Philip Tuhy was given the distinction as the first Professor in Residence of the Political Department in the Faculty of the Arts.

"I conducted a six-week seminar for faculty and students which emphasized Contemporary United States Politics, Public Administration and Political Science terminology."

He continued his instruction in the Law School and reviewed and evaluated the department's proposed curriculum.

Since his return in 1991, Tuhy has made several more trips of several weeks periods to continue to act as a consultant and hopes to return to the Republic of Slovakia for further work with the group who were his students and friends.

"This sabbatical leave was a life-enriching worthwhile experience for me. I had the opportunity of leaving in the country of my parents' birth when it is making the transformation from a totalitarian system to a democratic form of government or as they prefer to say 'Return to Democracy.' I was able to interact with a variety of individuals, and I believe that I made a significant contribution to an understanding of our system, and what they can learn from it," he assessed his tenure in Slovakia.

Novak was first introduced to Wilkes University through Professor Philip Tuhy, assistant professor of political science. They met during Tuhy's sabbatical at the Slovak Academy where Novak was serving as a deputy. Professor Tuhy heard of Novak's participation in the Eisenhower program and invited him to visit Wilkes during his tour.

SABBATICAL LEAVE SUMMARY

RECEIVED

APR 8 1991

PUBLIC RELATIONS
OFFICE

Introduction:

On August 1, 1989, I applied for Sabbatical Leave for the Fall Semester, 1990. The purpose of the leave was to study "Collegial Policy Making in a Socialist State as It Applies to Official Municipal Functions." The leave was approved on September 18, 1989.

On November 17, 1989, the "Velvet Revolution" occurred in Czecho-Slovakia, which made the original purpose of the study moot.

In January, 1990, I circulated my curriculum vitae and a general letter of introduction (copy attached) to a number of individuals with whom I had come in contact on my previous visits to Czecho-Slovakia. In March, I was contacted by Dr. David P. Daniel, special advisor to RNDr. Pavol Demeš, Director of the Foreign Relations Department of the Slovak Ministry of Education, Youth and Sports. He assured me that my talents would be of use to the Ministry and to the Slovak Republic.

On July 23, 1990, I departed for the Czech and Slovak Federated Republic. I returned on the 12th of January, 1991.

Learning ExperiencesSlovak Academy of Sciences:

Within twenty-four hours of my arrival in Bratislava, I was assigned to the Office of the Scientific Secretary in the Presidium of the Slovak Academy of Science. The Academy is comprised of some sixty research institutes, employing approximately 6,500 persons. I was given the title of "Poradca pre otázky zahraničných vzťahov v organizovaní a financovaní vedy" - (Advisor for foreign relation questions in the organization and financing of science). My assignments included:

1. Assist the senior staff in the improvement of their conversational English;
2. Editing the English versions of:
 - a. Current research projects available for international cooperation.
 - b. The Institutes of the Slovak Academy of Science.
3. Evaluation of the proposed reorganization of the Academy.
4. Evaluation of the proposed financial reorganization of the Academy.
5. Establish contact with similar organizations throughout the world.

While at the Academy, the two Deputy Secretaries of Science (present and former members of the Federal Parliament) introduced me to a large segment of the cultural, educational, political, and scientific community of the Slovak Republic.

Slovak National Gallery of Art:

As part of the semi-weekly discussion group held at the Gallery Vináren, I was invited to present a lecture on "The Dilemmas of Democracy."

Literarny Tyzdennik:

Based upon the lecture at the Gallery, I was requested to submit an article for publication in the "Literarny Tyzdennik." This is the second most popular and widely read literary weekly magazine in Slovakia. The article appeared in Volume 90/40, dated October 10, 1990, page 10.

Vysoka Vojanska Pedagogicka Škola, Bratislava:

I was invited to present a lecture on "Dilemii demokracie" for the staff and students of the Federal Military Teacher's Academy. I had the distinction of being the first Western lecturer, ever, to address the Academy, since it had previously been the Academy of Marxism-Leninism. Six weeks later, I held a seminar for the members of the politology faculty to discuss teaching methods and to review the curriculum that they had prepared for their four year program.

Vysoka Škola Ekonomicka, Bratislava:

Presented a seminar for the Institute for the National Economy of the Higher School of Economics on "Public Finance in the United States."

Úrad Štat a Sprava, SAV, Bratislava:

Presented a seminar for the Institute of State and Law of the Slovak Academy of Science on "Public Administration in the United States."

Institute of Social and Biological Communication:

An international workshop sponsored by the Institute was held at Smolnice Castle. The title of the workshop was: "The Concept of Democracy, Individual and Social Identity During the Transition from a Totalitarian System to a Democracy." I served as the political science consultant, and presented a paper on "The Political Science View of Democracy."

Slovak Association for Political Science:

Served as a Western resource person for the organizational meeting of the Association, and applied for membership.

Municipal Consultations:

After the municipal elections held at the end of November, was invited to meet with Ing. Viliam Snopko, Mayor of Prešov, and RNDr. Vladimír Katlovský, Mayor of Brezová pod Bradlom, to discuss problems associated with the establishment of a home-rule city. These two cities are located at opposite ends of the Republic of Slovakia.

Comenius University, Bratislava:

Given the distinction as the first Professor in Residence of the Politology Department in the Faculty of the Arts.

Conducted three six-week seminars for faculty and students:

1. Contemporary United States Politics
2. Introduction to Public Administration
3. Political Science Terminology (primarily faculty)

Presented a seminar for the Law School Faculty: "Study of Public Administration."

Reviewed and evaluated the Department's proposed curriculum.

Pavol Jozef Šafarik University, Prešov:Consultations:

1. Department of Adult Education: Proposed curriculum for a public administration program.
2. Department of Social Sciences: Proposed curriculum for a separate Department of Politology.
3. Pedagogical Faculty: The use of student evaluations.

Lectures/Seminars:

1. Introduction to Public Administration
2. The Political System in the United States
3. American National Government
4. The American Educational System
5. Inter-Governmental Relations in the United States

Evaluation:

This sabbatical leave was a life-enriching, worthwhile experience for me. I had the opportunity of living in the country of my parents' birth when it is making the transformation from a totalitarian system to a democratic form of government, or as they prefer to say "Return to Democracy!" I was able to interact with a variety of individuals, and I believe that I made a significant contribution to an understanding of our system, and what they can learn from it. It is a pleasant experience to feel needed and wanted.

Whenever called upon to make a formal presentation, I wore my Wilkes Colonel Blazer, and always left with the person in charge some memento with "Wilkes University" emblazoned upon it, either a coffee mug, pennant, or pen. I hope that I brought some distinction to the name of the University.

The manner in which Wilkes University wishes to capitalize upon these contacts is now an administrative decision.

11 January 1990

To Whom It May Concern:

Attached is a copy of my application for a Fulbright Award from the Council for the International Exchange of Scholars, and a copy of the Questionnaire for applicants for study stays in the Czechoslovak Socialist Republic.

The attached material demonstrates my background in municipal administration and my teaching experience at Wilkes University. I believe that my studies in the area of Public Administration will be of help to an institution of higher education in Slovakia in light of the recent events in Eastern Europe.

I have been granted a sabbatical leave from Wilkes University for the Fall Semester, 1990. This could possibly cover the period of June, 1990, to January, 1991. As part of this leave, I had planned on doing some study and research in Slovakia in an official capacity.

I would appreciate it if these documents could be brought to the attention of the appropriate authorities in Slovakia. I believe that I could lecture to the students at Komenius University, Safarik University, or the Higher School of Economics in Bratislava or Banská Bystrica. I would hope that someone at one of these institutions or the Ministry of Education could issue the official invitation.

Thank you very much for your consideration of this request. Your prompt attentions to this matter would be greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,

Philip R. Tuhy, Director
Institute of Regional Affairs

This is a lovely letter recognizing your generous contributions at Bratislava. Congratulations. I still hope for a relaxed debriefing, perhaps with Ted Engel, Dennis Hupchick and Walter Karpovich. Why not arrange with Peggy.

Should I respond to Kusi? If so could you propose a draft. Thanks,

3. Further Comments: (Describe why individual was selected for nomination)

Philip R. Tuhy has served as chairman of the Luzerne-Wyoming Executive Commission on Drugs and Alcohol since October of 1979. Under his adept leadership, the bi-county program has undergone extensive reorganization. Specifically, Mr. Tuhy organized a long-range planning Task Force which conducted an in-depth analysis of education, prevention, intervention, and treatment programming. As a result of that committee's findings, detoxification expenditures were significantly reduced, while service levels were maintained, rural outpatient services were augmented, prevention programming to local school districts was upgraded (in the introduction of a special curriculum project), and increased education services were offered to such select target populations as the elderly and women.

Mr. Tuhy continually makes himself available to program staff and gives unselfishly of his time and organizational talents.

Phil has a long history of community activism, beyond his contributions to drug and alcohol program planning.

Because of his leadership, approachable management style and concern for people, the Luzerne-Wyoming County community has benefitted immeasurably.

For these reasons I endorse Philip Tuhy unreservedly for consideration for the Benjamin Rush Award.

Drug, Alcohol Program Maintains Effort

The Luzerne Wyoming County Drug and Alcohol Program continued to operate last year at full capacity despite a financial squeeze in funding.

Although, historically, the Drug and Alcohol Program has not been adjusted with rate of inflation, an influx of new money stopped further cut-backs in service.

According to the annual report to the Luzerne County Commissioners, the acceptability of the Annual County Plan, as well as improvements in the state's allocation process, meant the program was awarded $78,707 additional dollars during fiscal year 1982-83 which forestalled a serious reduction in client services.

Thomas E. DiMatteo, executive director, characterized the year as "a very successful venture in terms of providing services during a year of constricting dollars."

The function of the program is to provide prevention services and community education on drug and alcohol abuse in Luzerne and Wyoming Counties. The program also contracts with three other agencies to give treatment services.

The Luzerne County Commissioners are the local sponsoring authority who approve the budget and provide county funds in order to obtain state dollars.

The agency comes under the Institution District, which is comprised of the three commissioners in Luzerne county. Frank P. Crossin is chairman of the Institution District.

Crossin said the county "has been, is, and will continue to be responsive to the needs of community residents."

Crossin noted that the program has succeeded despite recent cut-backs. "Given the funding limitations, our main thrust has been to provide the maximum service," he said, "we try to do the most good for the most people."

DiMatteo stressed the importance of the Drug and Alcohol Program at this time of economic uncertainty.

"Historically, there is an inverse relationship. As the economy worsens, incidents of substance abuse increase," DiMatteo said.

DiMatteo said that Drug and Alcohol will continue to reach out with a variety of programs to those designated "at risk" with respect to population. The elderly, women and children are identified as the "at risk" group in Luzerne County.

DiMatteo praised the other agencies in the Drug and Alcohol Service Delivery System for their cooperation, competence and caring.

Some of the accomplishments of the Drug and Alcohol Program in 1982 include:

- A grant to provide on-site diagnostic evaluations, on-site counseling referral and consultation services for elder alcoholics and other substance abusers. This was made possible by a contract with the Luzerne Wyoming Office on Aging. It is the only county Drug and Alcohol Program in the state to have such a liaison with a local office on Aging. Delivery of the service is provided by Wyoming Valley Alcohol and Drug Services, Inc.

- Another professional employee has been acquired to expand community prevention programming to target audiences of both elderly and female residents of the bi-county region.

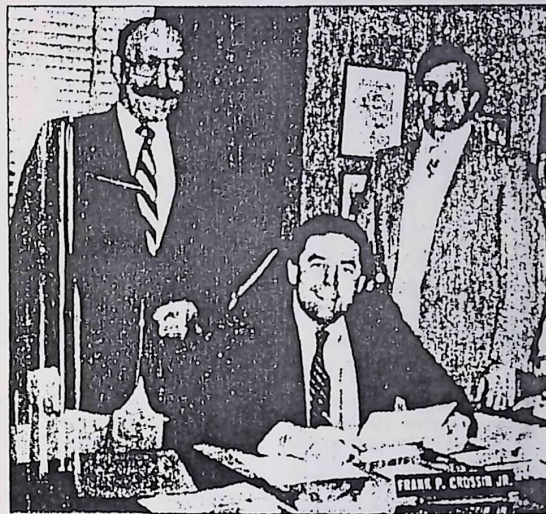

- An initiative to establish a community wide "prevention committee" which coordinates the delivery of prevention services in Luzerne and Wyoming Counties.

- The staff was involved in the formation of a local MADD Chapter (Mother Against Drunk Drivers).

- A self-help group for parents troubled by the behavior of teen age children, known as Toughlove, was established in March, 1982 and has continued on a weekly basis to this date.

For more information on these or any other program, contact the Luzerne Wyoming County Drug and Alcohol Program, 111 North Pennsylvania Boulevard, Wilkes-Barre, or call 822-7121.

Graduates Asked Not to Drink and Drive

By JERRY KISHBAUGH

Citizens' Voice Staff

Representatives of various Luzerne County agencies, Wilkes-Barre City Police and Students Against Drunk Driving (SAAD) were brought together Wednesday morning for a press conference coordinated by the Luzerne County Chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) in an effort to accent the problems and dangers associated with teenage drinking and driving.

Spokesmen from 10 different organizations assembled in the Commissioner's Room at the Luzerne County Courthouse to make the public more aware of the legal liabilities and responsibilities connected with providing alcoholic beverages to underage drinkers. More specifically, the representatives gathered together to prevent something from occurring — death or disabling injuries directly related to drunk driving among teenagers.

The focus was on underage drinking at graduation parties and what can be done to lessen incidents of teenagers driving while drunk.

Luzerne County Commissioner Frank Crossin stated, "The spirit of volunteerism shown today is impressive and I'm happy to see so many different organizations band together for a common cause."

Donna Dunio, a member of MADD's board of directors and community liaison specialist for Allied Services, served as moderator at the conference, which she said was staged to raise the consciousness of the community in regard to teenage drinking and driving.

Thomas Cesarini, chairman of the board of directors of MADD and a drug and alcohol specialist with the Luzerne-Wyoming County Drug and Alcohol Program, said it is important to make parents and their high school-aged children aware of the consequences associated with underage drinking at graduation parties. "We also want to make the youngsters aware of SADD. In addition, I must point out MADD needs the support of the community in its efforts to lessen the incidences of drunk driving," he commented.

Assistant District Attorney Joseph Giovannini said he wanted to emphasize his office's commitment in prosecuting not only juvenile offenders, but adults who supply booze to those that are underage. "The District Attorney's office cautions the parents, adults and teenagers to take a good hard look at the penalties involved with providing alcohol, underage drinking and driving while drunk," he noted.

"The police department urges parents of students to is happy to assist MADD and SADD in their efforts. People should take heart with the message being delivered by these groups."

Ned Delaney, director of the Court Advocate Program, pointed out his agency deals with juveniles apprehended for drunk driving. "Drinking among teenagers can be recreational as well as extremely dangerous. Unfortunately, juveniles view drinking as part of adult life and do not realize the dangers associated with it."

Referring to Delaney, Ed Pane, executive director of Hazleton's Alcohol and Drug Services, stated, "It'd like to most. SADD has helped more and more students or the realization that drunk driving is a threat to ours our family, our friends and innocent victims."

Alice Deats, president of the local chapter of MADD emphasized that more than 8,000 teenagers will be this year as a result of drunk driving. The next 100 will be crucial in our fight to prevent or, at least, c the number of accidents caused by drunk drivers.

Mrs. Deats also pointed out that MADD used small coffins and small wheelchairs as a reminder what can happen as a result of drinking-related mis- "I know, we will see balloons as a change. That's it."

Executives Preview Drunk Driving School

At a recent meeting of the Luzerne-Wyoming County Drug and Alcohol Program Executive Commission, the newly developed alcohol highway safety program and court reporting network were previewed.

The programs, administered through the Court Advocate Program of Catholic Social Services, are designed to fulfill the mandates of the state's new drunk driving law. The systems will provide both a diagnostic/evaluation service to the Luzerne County court and an educative service to court referred drunk drivers.

SEVENTEEN FILMS from the "Here's Looking at You — Two" curriculum were transferred from the Luzerne-Wyoming County Drug and Alcohol Program to the Luzerne Intermediate Unit 18 this month. Among those participating at the transfer were, from left to right, Thomas Cesarini, associate director of the drug and alcohol program; Nello Riccetti, executive director of Unit 18; Philip R. Tuhy, chairman of the drug and alcohol program executive committee; Francis Houston, instructional materials service director for Unit 18, and Dr. Thomas E. DiMatteo, executive director of the drug and alcohol program.

New Drug Prevention Program Set to Begin in Tunkhannock

The Luzerne-Wyoming County Drug and Alcohol Program and the Luzerne Intermediate Unit 18 joined efforts to prevent drug and alcohol abuse among young people in Luzerne and Wyoming counties.

The Drug and Alcohol Program loaned the intermediate unit 17 films, part of a comprehensive drug and alcohol prevention curriculum, for students in grades kindergarten through 12.

In turn, Luzerne Intermediate Unit will process the films through their instructional materials service, making the films available through an established loan system that all of the schools have been utilizing for years.

Frances M. Houston is the director of the instructional materials service.

The curriculum, "Here's Looking at You — Two," is considered one of the best drug and alcohol education prevention programs in the country. "Here's Looking at You — Two" recognizes the need for accurate information, but also considers other human needs.

The curriculum focuses on four major components: Information, decision making, self concept and coping, assisting young people to develop such critical life skills related to issues of individual drug and alcohol use or abuse is the major goal of the curriculum.

Thomas Cesarini of the Luzerne-Wyoming County Drug and Alcohol Program provided orientation programs on the curriculum to all school superintendents, curriculum directors, and many teachers and parent groups in the bi-county area.

In addition, selected teachers in the Dallas, Wilkes-Barre, Lake Lehman, Tunkhannock, Northwest, Nanticoke, Hanover, Crestwood, Wyoming Valley West, Wyoming and Pittston school districts have been trained to utilize the curriculum.

Three districts — Dallas, Lake Lehman and Tunkhannock, have received subsequent training and have proceeded to implement the curriculum in the elementary grades, the long range goal is to have all districts implement the curriculum comprehensively, that is, providing it to all students in grades kindergarten through 12.

Landfills And Rules On Rides Are Discussed

Sanitary landfills and a need for strict inspection of amusement rides, were the subject at last night's meeting of the Columbia Montour Boroughs Association. The session was held in Albright United Methodist Church, Third street, Nescopeck.

A resolution was passed there, on suggestion of Nescopeck Councilman Ernest E. Lynn, asking a regulatory agency or uniform standard of regulation and control of amusement rides. Mr. Lynn's daughter sustained extremely serious injuries when a ride failed, at Bloomsburg Fair, last year. She had been in critical condition for a long period after the accident.

Copies of the resolution are to be forwarded to State Representatives Kent Shelhamer and Franklin Kury and to Sen. Preston L. Davis in the hopes of getting such legislation through. There were 37 people attending from seven municipalities.

Atty. Nickolas Piazza and Atty. Donald Lewis were named co-chairman of the legislative committee and Paul D. Jacobs, Bloomsburg, was appointed representative to the State Boroughs Association.

Philip Thy of Wilkes College's Institute of Regional Affairs, spoke on the landfill subject.

See "Rules," Page 5, Col. 8

Rules

He said his organization is available to all for consultation — without cost.

He said a sanitary landfill is the best solution for disposal of solid waste but said it is true that no municipality wants to have a landfill within its confines but that if one is operated properly it does not present a nuisance. He said percolation tests of the land is first taken to learn whether the ground is such that underground water supplies would be affected.

Mayor Yurek, Nescopeck, gave the address of welcome and Miss Tracy Byrne, Nescopeck, was soloist of the program. Mrs. Marian Matthews, Berwick, was accompanist and Mayor C. Martin Lutz, Bloomsburg, presided.

Philip Tuhy Offered Post of City Planner

Wilkes-Barre City Manager Frederick E. Wegner plans to fill vacancies in top positions at City Hall on a day-to-day basis until a new city manager arrives on the scene and is able to select his own staff.

Offered the post of executive director of the Bureau of Planning is Philip Tuhy, a member of the Wilkes College faculty and also on the staff of the school's Regional Affairs Institute. He formerly held the city planning position. The city planner job was vacated by Howard Miura on Feb. 14.

Wegner said Tuhy would serve "on loan" from the Institute only to keep key programs rolling until a new city manager can hire a planner.

No Other Applicants

Wegner said he had not received any applications for the position of City Engineer-Director of Public Works. He denied a report that he had interviewed County Engineer Bernard Gallagher for the position to succeed Elmer Bailey who resigned earlier this month.

Another post to be filled on a day-to-day basis is that of Finance Director, a position vacated by John Marcinkowski in January.

Wegner said he has no one in mind for the new position of "Assistant Manager" contained in the supplemental budget adopted last week. The $10,000 post was advocated originally as "deputy manager" by Wegner, but this suggestion was dropped by City Council when the 1969 budget was originally adopted. "Now they call the job 'assistant', but it is the same as the 'deputy' post I had recommended," Wegner observed.

Acting Planner

Tuhy Visits City Hall To Check Planning Job

Philip Tuhy of the Wilkes College's Institute of Regional Affairs visited City Hall on Thursday to familiarize himself with the Department of Planning.

He once served as city planner here. When the position became vacant with the resignation of Howard Miura, City Council agreed to hire the Institute at $50 a day. The Institute, in turn, assigned Tuhy to part-time duty at City Hall.

Things are in a bad way in the Bureau of Planning, personnel-wise. Besides a permanent planner, the Planning Commission Chairman, Clement Perkins, also resigned.

And if that isn't trouble enough, last week Helen M. Bar-chak, who was secretary to Miura, entered a city hospital as a patient.

Tuhy, however, will find draftsman Donald N. Dancheck and Code Enforcement Coordinator Parker Davis on hand this week to help explain current programs. And also, he will find a note from Miura on what's to be done.

On his visit to City Hall on Thursday, Tuhy mostly looked around and said "hello" to City Manager Frederick E. Wegner.

They wore identical floor length gowns of forest green velvet, sleeveless in design and featuring jewel necklines. Dior bows of matching green velvet were their headpieces while each carried a shaft arrangement of natural, yellow fusi chrysanthemums. Honorary matron of honor was Mrs. Donald Hancock of Lansdowne, sister of the bride. She wore a gold dress with a browntone cymbidium orchid.

Cyril Tuhy, Tucson, Arizona, was best man for his brother. Serving as ushers were Bruce Collman, West Chester, nephew of the bridegroom; George W. Murdock, Bear Creek, and William A. Zdancevich, Edwardsville.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Krauss selected a green crepe suit which featured a lace overblouse. Her accessories were black and she wore a corsage of yellow cymbidium orchids.

Evening Reception

An evening reception was held in the Pocono Room of the Holiday Inn Motel, East End Boulevard, Wilkes-Barre, after which the couple went on a short motor trip. Upon their return, they will reside at 218 Rutter avenue, Kingston. For going away, the bride wore a light blue, knit jacket-dress ensemble on princess line, complemented with beige accessories and a corsage of like colored cymbidium orchids.

The bride is a graduate of Meyers High School and studied at the Chamberlain School of Retailing in Boston, Mass. She was employed as a buyer at the University Bookstore of the State University of New York.

Instructor At Wilkes

University, and his master of governmental administration from Fels Institute of the University of Pennsylvania. The bride was feted at pre-nuptial showers by employees of the State University of Buffalo Bookstore, Buffalo, N. Y.; and by Mrs. George Murdock, Bear Creek and Mrs. Carl Urbanski, Kingston. Other occasions included a party given in Buffalo, N. Y., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hopps; a tea by the YWCA Staff, Wilkes-Barre, at the home of Mrs. Ruth Nordberg, Kingston; and a tea given last Sunday by her mother, held in the Crystal Ballroom, Hotel Sterling.

That was the appreciation gift presented to guest speaker, Pete Retzlaff of the Philadelphia Eagles professional football team. Retzlaff accepts the imprinted football from Chapter President P. Laue.

In the Jaycees he held offices as secretary, external and internal vice president, executive vice president, president and State director. He also served as State chairman of the community development and as a vice president. He is a past Spoke winner, first year Jaycee; and a past State winner in the organizations "Speak Up Jaycee" Program.

He is a member of St. Matthew Evangelical Lutheran Church, Wilkes-Barre, having served as secretary of Beacon Club, the church council, four years; member of the board of elders, Senior Choir, adviser to Board of Education, and teacher of High School Bible class.

Tuhy is a past president of Wilkes-Barre Chapter, Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America (SPEBSQSA), and a member of the bass section in the chorus.

This year's DSA winner is among the young men whose names appear in the 1965 edition of "Outstanding Young Men in America." He is 35 years of age and the son of the late Rev. and Mrs. Stephen Tuhy, St. Matthew's Church, and now resides at 69 North Goodwin Avenue, Kingston.

Past DSA Winners attending and formally introduced included Albert G. Albert, Wilkes-Barre; Rev. Dr. Jule Ayers, Wilkes-Barre; John J. Dougherty, Jr., Mountaintop; Blythe Evans, Plymouth, and the toastmaster, J. B. Post, Jr., Luzerne County commissioner.

Wilkes-Barre Lacks Planner

Tuhy Recalled by Wilkes Institute

With the Institute of Regional Affairs recalling Philip R. Tuhy to his position as assistant to the institute's executive director, Wilkes-Barre City for the second time in less than a year is without a professional planner in its Department of Planning and Development.

Tuhy has been serving as acting city planner since shortly after the resignation of Howard Miura early this year as the result of the 1969 budget hassel which saw several city hall professionals, including City Manager Frederick Wogner, leave the city government.

Recalling of Tuhy comes at a time when the city is about to submit its workable program to the Federal government for recertification.

Planning officials could not say yesterday what affect the lack of a planner would have on the Federal government's decision on the recertification application, but it is known the Federal government does not look favorably on the lack of a professional planner.

If the recertification is withheld by the Federal government, it could result in the stoppage of all future Federally supported programs.

Termination of the agreement between the city and the regional affairs institute was made known to city officials in a letter over the signature of Dr. Hugo V. Mailey, institute director.

Since Miura left the city, council has advertised in various professional publications for the services of a full-time planner. However, some city planners are receiving much higher salaries than the $12,900 offered by Wilkes-Barre.

For 1970, City Manager Frank Vanore proposed the city pay $15,000 annually for a full-time planner. However, it is expected this salary proposal will be cut in the city manager's amended 1970 budget to be presented to council Tuesday night.

Lack of a full-time planner through 1969 partly curtailed city planning programs.

Consultant's Services
Needed By Institute,
Council Informed

PHILIP R. TUHY

The Institute of Regional Affairs of Wilkes College has terminated its agreement to provide planning consultant services to Wilkes-Barre City.

The termination was made known to City Manager Frank Vanore, Mayor John V. Morris and members of city council in a letter over the signature of Dr. Hugo V. Malley, institute director.

As a result of the letter, Philip R. Tuhy, assistant to Dr. Malley, ceased to function as of yesterday as part-time planner for the city. Wilkes-Barre has been without a planner since the resignation of Howard Miura in 1969 following a budget hearing that saw several city officials, including former City Manager Frederick E. Wegner, leave the community.

In the original 1969 budget adopted by a Republican majority of council, Mr. Miura was scheduled to be given a salary of $11,400 for this year. City Manager Wegner had recommended a salary of $13,200.

Several weeks after the original budget was adopted, Miura resigned. However, in mid-February city council passed a supplemental budget setting the planning director's salary by $1,500 to a total of $12,900.

Several weeks after the original budget was adopted, Miura resigned. However, in mid-February city council passed a supplemental budget setting the planning director's salary by $1,500 to a total of $12,900.

Since Miura left the city, council has continually advertised in various professional publications for the services of a full-time planner. However, some city planners are receiving much higher salaries than that being offered by Wilkes-Barre. The city has nearly two dozen applications at present, but many of these men already are receiving higher salaries.

For 1970, City Manager Frank Vanore proposed that the city pay a salary of $15,000 for a full-time planner.

Lack of a full-time planner through 1969 partially curtailed city planning programs. If the city fails to hire a planner in 1970, it appears the municipality will be in trouble as far as Federal programs are concerned.

Following is Dr. Malley's letter to the city, dated December 9:

"The Institute of Regional Affairs of Wilkes College has been providing planning consultant services to the City under terms of Council Resolution 30900, dated March 4, 1969. Confirmation of the Resolution was given by letter of the City Manager dated March 5, 1969.

"The increasing public service responsibilities of the Institute have reached the point where it is no longer feasible to assign members of its staff exclusively to one project on long-term basis such as Planning Consultant to the City.

"The Institute is therefore compelled to notify the City of Wilkes-Barre that the aforementioned agreement be terminated as of December 10, 1969."

The resolution referred to in the letter specified that the part-time planning consultant would spend at least two days a week as Director of Planning for the City of Wilkes-Barre at a rate of $50 per day.

The same resolution named

Mr. Tuhy of the Institute of Regional Affairs as the part-time planner. All councilmen voted "yes" on the resolution.

SO LONG 'TIL FALL

This NEWSLETTER is published on a monthly basis nine times each year. There is normally a three month hiatus during the summer months to permit staff time off for vacations, to make activity plans for the coming school year, and to establish firm schedules. Then too, since most of our readers also take vacations, it would be difficult to forward all copies to them at their favorite mountain or shore resort, and we certainly couldn't expect the publication to be read with its due interest by those who will take long naps on the household hammock.

So, the next issue will reach you by mid-October. We do hope you will miss us until then.

CELEBRATE WHAT?

July 4, 1976 will mark the 200th anniversary of our independence as a nation. Age itself gives us little cause for celebration for among the family of nations, we are not the eldest or the youngest. Nor is the mere fact of independence. The true significance of the observance is that two centuries ago a nation was founded on tenets of faith which for the first time in history proclaimed the dignity and freedom of the Common Man. We celebrate because through all the vicissitudes of history, the ideals of the Revolution of '76 have survived as the creed of America and the hope of the peoples of the world.

Preparations for the occasion are underway. Philadelphia, the City of Independence, has been designated as the official Bicentennial City, and the Congress has made initial appropriations for projects there. But all American communities should, and will undoubtedly participate in appropriate fashion. Everywhere there are signs of planning pains. How to celebrate is the large question of the moment, and, perhaps, may be the primary concern for the next two years, and counting.

How we celebrate is indeed important. But, we submit, our primary concern now and in the future should be with what we are celebrating. Communities can at any time sponsor public displays, hold parades, perform pageants, listen to speeches, and even construct monuments, bridges, hospitals, recreation centers, or dedicate public parks. These are good. But such activities are not enough apropos of our Bicentennial. Its' true significance, and the thrust of our effort, should be in recalling the principles of the American Creed born in the Revolution of '76 and reaffirming our faith in that Creed as the goal of the continuing American Revolution.

At this very moment in our history, there is a growing doubt whether the American people remember the basics of that revolutionary faith. We are often said to be a confused people lacking real social values because we have forgotten the facts and meaning of the democratic ideals which have bound us into a free nation. The mere word "revolution" has become traitorous. Ignorance of the articles of faith upon which our nation was established and developed is approaching an alarming state. To relearn and rededicate ourselves to the fundamentals of American independence — this is the problem during the next two years which should be of primary concern to our governments, our churches, our schools, our families, and all individuals.

There is no better teaching guide for relearning the facts and meaning of our democratic experience than the unique and courageous words of Thomas Jefferson:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. — That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. — That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new

INSTITUTE OF REGIONAL AFFAIRS NEWSLETTER

VOL. XX JULY 15, 1974 NO. 6

Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness."

These truths, which are the American Creed, had lain dormant in the spirit of man for centuries. Our Declaration of Independence for the first time in history congealed then into a positive credo and bravely proclaimed them to the world. They have since been the goal of all freedom loving peoples. They comprise the soul of America. Their reaffirmation is the object of the Bicentennial.

Perhaps we ought to paste a copy of Jefferson's statement on our bathroom mirrors to remind us each morning that these ideals are what America is all about. Many of us have never learned them; others have forgotten them; and still others question the validity of the contention that striving for them has been the essence of our nation's history.

Some attribute our greatness as a free nation to our long isolation by two oceans from the destructive wars of Europe; others to the good fortune of rich natural resources at the very moment when the Industrial Revolution required them. Frederick Jackson Turner wrote that it was the existence of the ever-shifting frontier and its challenges which endowed American civilization with unique promise and vitality and a NEW set of ideals to meet the demands of the new environment. The great flood of immigrants to this country, it is frequently said, occurred, not because Europeans sought to escape the civil and political oppression of class societies, but purely to escape their abject economic poverty.

In his Nobel Prize winning book, "The Americans: The Democratic Experience", Daniel Boorstin tries to show that we became a great democratic nation, not because of some intangible principles, but because of the things all Americans were able to buy and enjoy, including everything from candy bars to air conditioning.

There may be at least some validity to all of these theories, but the logical implication is that throughout our history, yes, even on July 4, 1776, Americans have only paid "lip service" to the truths of the Declaration. Obviously, as individuals and as a nation we have not always "lived up to" Jefferson's American credo. Neither have we fully achieved its ultimate goal. Nor have we agreed on the meaning of "equality of all men", how "government by the consent of the governed" can be implemented, or if the "right to alter or abolish" unacceptable government includes the right to violent revolution.

There is, indeed, a dichotomy between our democratic ideals and their practice, and our failure to resolve the difference in two centuries poses a threat to our free society. Gunnar Myrdal, noted Swedish scholar, pointed out this conflict between the principles of what he termed "The American Dream" — the essential dignity of the individual, the basic equality of all men, and certain inalienable rights to freedom, justice and fair opportunity — and the treatment of minority groups, especially the negroes, in America. He did not, however, disavow the principles nor the practice. His thesis was that the disjunction between the national creed and daily practice were really a promising sign. Despite our conflicting views, he says, there is a strong unity in our nation because we all have something in common — "a social ethos, a political creed." It is difficult to avoid the judgment that this American Creed is the cement in the structure of this great and disparate nation". In short, Americans may not always "practice what they preach", but they do believe that Jefferson's principles OUGHT to rule our nation's conduct. These principles may be a myth, but the important point is that as a people we believe in them as our American Creed.

Our geographic frontiers are gone; our critical resources are near exhaustion; our immigration laws no longer invite the freedom-seeking poor and oppressed of the world; and, our almost universal enjoyment of material conveniences may be severely limited by economic dysfunction. If these were the forces which created and developed our nation, and held us together spiritually, what future has America without them?

Americans have never put much stock in ideologies like the neatly tied theoretical packages of Marxist-Leninism, Fascism, or National Socialism. But Americans as individuals and as a nation have always had ideals to which they turned in time of frustrations, uncertainties, and troubles. It may not be possible to make a comprehensive list of them or to organize them into a logical system of thought. But whatever they are, ideals have made this a united nation with more freedom and equality than the world ever dreamed possible.

It may not be altogether correct to call Jefferson's basic concept a comprehensive creed. Nevertheless, his pregnant words are both the beginning and the ending of whatever our creed may be.

The failure of our modern educational institutions, our churches, and our families to inculcate and explain the inner meaning and importance, yes of worship, of the immortal words of our Declaration of Independence, is a real threat to the life of the world's greatest and freest nation. Ignorance and unawareness of the Declaration's concepts among our high school and college students is appalling. It is, if anything, worse among those with little or no schooling. Little wonder that some "cynics" contend that our country is falling apart at the seams. What else can we expect without a creed of common social values to bind us together?

What should we celebrate during our bicentenary? The articles of conviction and faith which gave dignity and nobility to our original Revolution and provided a common faith which made us one people.

How should we celebrate our Bicentenary? Have your pageants, your speeches, your parades, your monuments, and spend the next two years in preparation. But, better still, bend every effort during those years to relearn, reaffirm, and reteach through every means the essential equality of all men, the basic rights of a free people, the right of the governed to govern, and the alterability of government as the people deem appropriate and proper.

To this goal, "We pledge our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor."

THOUGHTS FOR TODAY

A speaker once said, "My duty is to speak and yours to listen, but if you finish before I do, please let me know."

Calvin Coolidge once profoundly concluded that "When people get out of work, unemployment tends to rise."

It's not too bad to learn that your grandfather was the town drunk until you realize that he lived in New York City.

Some people who drove compact cars during the gas shortage tried to maintain their status by showing pictures of the Cadillacs they had at home.

After several years of matrimony, many a wife notices that something has gone out of her marriage. Usually it's her husband.

An indecisive gentlemen thought of killing himself but couldn't make up his mind. So he threw himself in front of a parked car.

Slovak Youth Congress will begin Friday in Poconos

The Third Festival of Youth of the Slovak World Congress will be held Friday, June 27, through Friday, July 4, at Mount Airy Lodge, Mount Pocono.

More than 1,000 young persons from the United States, Canada, western Europe and South America will attend the festival.

Opening ceremonies will be conducted Saturday, June 28, at 10 a.m. with a parade of flags of all nations and participants dressed in their native costumes. Justine Wesnak, president of the Youth for the Slovak World Congress, will present the opening address.

Theme is "Slovak Som A Slovak Budem" — "A Slovak I am and a Slovak I will remain."

The first festival was held in Waldraiburg, West Germany. The purpose of the festival is to gather young people of Slovak origin to meet and exchange their views, and to promote their Slovak heritage in the communities in which they live.

Seminars will be presented daily in Slovak literature, language, dance and song. Both competitive and recreational sports events will be held for participants.

Thursday, July 3, will be U.S.A. Day. "From Liberty's View," an original script written by Karen Buynak, Slovak Heritage Society member, explains the American Slovak traditions and customs shared by other ethnic groups. The day's program, honoring the 100th anniversary of the Statue of Liberty, will be held from 8:30 to 10:30 p.m. in the sports arena.

The dancers and musical renditions will be given by participating young people from all over the United States. Robert Niznik, professional choreographer, heads this portion of the program. The grand finale will be performed by Wilkes-Barre and Hazleton area participants.

REFLECTIONS FROM ROYOVA
June 22, 1992
Philip R. Tuhy
Assistant Professor - Political Science
Wilkes University

"These are the times that try men's souls!" With apologies to Charles Dickens, a tale of two cities might very well be about Prague and Bratislava. There is a great deal of uncertainty in these times of change. There is a brand new government based upon a new political party and new leaders facing some very serious questions. Will the positive changes be continued? Will the difficult decisions be made and carried out?

It is very difficult for any person living in democracy in the Western World to comprehend living under totalitarian system for more than forty years. The Slovaks learned to survive as they have under various forms of oppressive rule for the past one thousand years. To expect people living under this system for a full generation and a half to immediately become a democratic state is to expect the impossible. It is a return to democracy, but with certain limitations.

There are many people in the West who do not quite understand what is taking place in the Czech and Slovak Federated Republic, especially since they only receive fragmented reports in the press. To appreciate these events, one has to consider a number of factors: attitudes, anti-Havel feelings, and the Meciar phenomenon.

In the Prague press, one of the more frequently asked questions is "What do the Slovaks really want?" The answer is equality. Many of the Czechs insist that equality already exists, but how is it practiced?

There is a tendency on the part of many Czech leaders to view the Slovaks with a condescending attitude, akin to the way in which an individual would regard their slow-witted younger brother, insisting that they know what is best for all concerned.

This is particularly evident in the field of economic development. During the previous regime, the primary thrust was to shift heavy industry to Slovakia. At the present time, investment from the West has been funneled through Prague with only about 17 percent to Slovakia. Of the funds borrowed from the West, only about 6 percent has been given to Slovakia though they will be held responsible for the repayment of one-third. Is this equality?

Another attitude which the Slovaks find disturbing is that all news about the Czechs and Slovaks emanates from Prague. One can buy Czech newspapers in Slovakia, but it is virtually impossible to buy a Slovak newspaper in Prague. Western journalists rarely stray beyond the confines of the city. This is as though one can evaluate the United States by staying within the confines of the Washington, D.C. beltway.

Although he is highly regarded throughout the world and in the Czech and Slovak Federated Republic, President Havel is criticized for a number of specific mistakes. The General Amnesty which he proclaimed upon taking office was to benefit political prisoners, but resulted in the release of a number of psycho-paths and hardened criminals.

Havel's declaration that Czechoslovakia would cease production of the implements of war was another serious mistake, according to many Slovaks. With the immediate closing of the tank factory in Martin, Slovakia, more than 50,000 employees were out of work.

However, small arms production in Bohemia was increased in hopes of improving national trade. The rate of unemployment is between 12 and 15 in Slovakia and only 3 percent in Bohemia.

When I left Slovakia in January, 1991, the major question on the Federal level was the matter of the constitution, or specifically how the powers of government should be divided between the two republics and the federal government. This issue was being discussed by the three premiers - Czech, Slovak and Federal. The Slovak Meciar and the Czech Pithart were the champions of careful enumeration of powers.

After the recent election, it became evident from the campaign that there are two dominant personalities on the political scene, economist V. Klaus on the Czech side and former boxer V. Meciar on the Slovak side.

Thus begins what I would call the ultimate stud poker game. Klaus has Havel and world opinion on his side, and only Meciar knows his hand.

Neither political party or Republic has an absolute majority in the Parliament. Meciar has been playing his cards close to the vest. He has infuriated members of the Western press by sending representatives to present some of his positions.

Meciar has insisted on his previous position as Premier though the Czech and Slovak Federated Republic is composed of two equal powers.

Meciar is an interesting character. He appears to be the typical ex-boxer, blunt, sometimes un-diplomatic, coarse, forceful. However, he has a very quick mind, a quick-study capable of absorbing informations at a rapid rate.

As a politician, he has followed the traditional path, promising everything to everybody. To the Slovaks this is rather confusing. Can they believe him? Which are the "campaign promises" and which are the sincere statements?

As with any card game, it is a gamble. The stakes are very high. The last card will be dealt very shortly, and then the betting will begin. The negotiations during the past weeks have been both intense and lengthy, lasting from eight to sixteen hours. Progress has been made, with each players slowly recognizing the strength of the other.

So who do you back - the smiling Klaus of the poker-faced Meciar?

I am betting of the approach of Meciar. As he said yesterday, "Don't start writing the obituaries yet!" It is going to be a long and difficult road, full of mistaken turns and set-backs, but I am confident that they will make it - with (hopefully) or without the help of the United States!

Czech physicist tours science & engineering centers at Wilkes

Wilkes University was on the itinerary of a Czechoslovakian physicist as he traveled through the United States recently in conjunction with the Eisenhower Exchange Fellowship program.

Ivo Novak, director of the Center for the Advancement of Science and Technology in Bratislava in the Czech and Slovak Federated Republic, toured the science laboratories and computer facilities of the Wilkes University School of Science and Engineering. Dean Umid R. Nejib discussed ways for the Slovak scientists to introduce their technology to the realm of the western world and the University's Technology Transfer program.

Novak was introduced to Wilkes University through Professor Philip Tuhy, assistant professor of political science. They met during Tuhy's sabbatical at the Slovak Academy where Novak was serving as deputy. Professor Tuhy heard of Novak's participation in the Eisenhower Program and invited him to visit Wilkes during his tour.

The Eisenhower Exchange Fellowships have provided opportunities for participants from more than 100 countries to meet American leaders in business, education, government, labor and technology. Participants are chosen from a variety of professions relevant to key issues facing their society and travel to the United States for eight weeks of closely scheduled consultations, visits, conferences and social activities.
