A Note about the Play --

Eugene O'Neill's Ah, Wilderness!

Kids are like cakes. They fool you, sometimes, into thinking they raise themselves. Kids, that is. As parents, we depend on cook books and books on child care. But somehow, cakes and kids defy recipes. Even when we follow the rules we are always a little fearful about the way they'll turn out. Cakes, that is. Stand over them, or watch them too close and they never seem to turn out right. There aren't any statistics, yet, as valid as a liberal dose of laughter or love, or, maybe, an act of God. And like recipes and books on child care, they've got to be brought up-to-date. Parents, that is.
